IPC Class:

F41G 5/20; G01S 13/88;

Abstract:

Purpose: To permit safe retreatment from an enemy, by a method wherein attack instruction is commanded immediately to an attacking vehicle, attack a threatening target in an early period and launch a chaff when a ship has detected the advent of the threatening target through a radar.

Constitution: A target information processing device 5 operates and analyses target movement data based on a remote control command 11 and navigation data 12 on a display device 7 and sends analysed data 10 back to the display device 7. An operator outputs the remote control commands 11, such as advance, attack, retreat and the like, for an attack vehicle 15 and transmits tactical informations 17 from the target information processing device 5 to the attack vehicle 15 through a communication circuit 6 between the communicating devices 18 on the ship 2 and the vehicle 15. The attack vehicle 15 transmits the tactical information 17 and the navigation data 12 to a weapon control device 6 to launch an attack missile 14 against a threatening target 1 at a proper time and, thereafter, the attack vehicle 15 launches a chaff and retreats when a given time has elapsed.
